Preparing for and passing a test has been called a skill. Some might say it is a natural skill. Just as an example, did you ever notice when you were in school that certain people could get away with studying very little and then ACE a test while others could study for hours on end and fail the very same test?

Well, we at ExamForce are here to tell you that its not all due to natural skill. Or - pure "talent". In most cases, those who were "good" at taking tests didn't really know exactly why they did good. But we do. Because that's what we do. Those people knew...by instinct...or just gut feel...what to study. They realized while studying and trying to absorb information that they weren't picking up or retaining some things as well or as easy as others. So, in most cases without realizing it...

they started re-focusing MORE time on their Weakest Areas.

Everybody Absorbs and Retains Information Differently

Everybody tends to approach studying in the same general way. Read. Think. Absorb. Read, Think, Absorb. And they repeat this process over and over again till they think they have it all and are done. Cramming if you will. But everybody absorbs different kinds of materials or concepts in different ways. Some stuff gets sucked up like a sponge, while others...well, rolls like water off of a ducks back...

To Insure You'll Pass the A+ Essentials Exam: Concentrate on your Greatest Weaknesses

So in preparing for certification examinations like the A+, it is wisest to concentrate on areas you are weak in. This is where ExamForce excels and it is what sets us apart from our competition. Our testing engine is the only one that allows you to start off immediately by identifying what areas you are weak in and then allows you to focus your testing on those specific areas of weakness. Which also has the end result of streamlining your studying (by concentrating mainly on what you need to study, not what you already know) and possibly even reducing your total study time.

"CramMaster is the best test preparation engine I've ever used. I've taken over 100 IT certification exams, and I wish I would have used this software for all of them. The CramMaster engine does an exceptional job of pointing out your weaknesses and helping you turn them into strengths. I guarantee you one thing; I'll use them for every exam I take in the future."
